Excerpt: . . . Emerging Judicial Strategies for the Mentally Ill individual to individual. While a goal for substance abusers can clearly and measurably be abstinence within the timeframe of the drug court treatment program, such a practical framework is not so readily available in the treatment of mental illness. Courts cannot say, be cured within 12 months. They can expect that participants successfully follow the steps to improved functioning outlined in a treatment plan agreed upon by the participant and the mental health professionals. Thus, the challenge for setting achievable milestones for mental health court professionals is more complex and the functional equivalent of graduation may differ consider-ably from individual to individual. Range of Responses to Participant Behavior Performance To an observer of other problem-solving courts, particularly drug courts where some of the in-court techniques were first developed, the mental health court model faces special challenges in devising responses to par-ticipant performance in treatment. One might argue that the experience of drug courts in the United States suggests that drug abusers respond well to a very structured system of incentives and sanctions when moving through the treatment process toward sobriety and improved functional-ity. These approaches are crafted based on assumptions about the behav-iors of addicted persons, including a belief that very basic lessons and behaviors may have to be taught and retaught for substance abuse treat-ment to be successful. Many drug courts have devised a rich range of re-sponses rewarding participants...
